The Leopard is undergoing repairs at Virtuoso Joinery. Ian Godfrey, who took this photo, has told us " 'Leo' has settled in well. He is very chilled out, and even helping around the workshop."

While working on the Bell tower, Ian also came across the lead plaque with the following inscription:

THIS BELL TOWER WAS REBURBISHED BY STEEPLEJACKS
ROBERT FRANK HARFIELD
LAURENCE SMITH
DANIELL HUETT

FROM OCTOBER 1985
TILL JANUARY 1986

WARDEN AT THE TIME D.A.D.J. BETHALL

News from the Warden

It is now rather late to wish everyone a Happy New Year, but I will do so all the same, and trust that it will be a good one for all of our Friends.

Sadly I have to report that Mr Robert Turner, one of our Friends, lost his dear wife, Marjorie, earlier this year. Both Robert and Marjorie have been keen supporters of the College, taking an active part in helping on the important open days. Marjorie always had a smile and was willing to help out where needed. We will miss Marjorie very much, and have sent our condolences to Robert. We also offer up prayers for them both.

As you will read further on, this year is a very special one for Sackville College, but before we move on, I would like to step back into December 2015. On the 7th, we had the first of our annual public carol evenings. These have become so popular that people were booking seats in September. As usual – a full house. This year again, Andrew Clifford very kindly volunteered to play the organ for us. It is so good of him to do so, and much appreciated. He finished the evening with Christmas themed music to which we could all sing, 'Thank you Andrew'. Our thanks also to Marion Small, who sang a solo again this year.

Two nights later, we had our second evening of Carols and Christmas music, being entertained by Cantu Amici. They are such a popular group of singers and musicians, and extremely talented. We, the not quite so talented, joined in at the appropriate times. Thank you so very much Cantu Amici. Some of the group are professionals; all donate their time and talent for the benefit of the College. "Thank you". Again – Full house.

News

On Monday, November 2nd, 2015, a wonderful Charity Dinner was held at CJ's Café Bar. The theme, 'Dad's Army', was represented by the Warden, wearing part of his own Army uniform, and Steve, in overalls as the ARP Warden. We had sausage and mash and a lovely pudding with custard. The evening raised about £500 for Sackville College. Thank you to everyone who came along, to Penny Fisher for collecting Raffle prizes from local shops- an unenviable task- and for organising the Raffle, to the local shops who provided gifts, and to Chris and Julie at CJ's and their staff, for giving up their night off. Chris also acted as Master of Ceremonies for the Raffle draw.

This year is a special anniversary year- the 150th Anniversary of the death of Warden John Mason

Neale, at Sackville College on August 6th 1866. Special events will be held to mark the occasion, including a display in East Grinstead Library.

No Strings Attached

Will be returning for the third time to perform their varied repertoire of songs, both unaccompanied and with strings and keyboard. They will be at Sackville College on Saturday, June 18th, for an evening concert. Tickets will include some refreshments during the interval.

We would like to hold a Raffle at this event. Donations of items suitable for raffle prizes would be much appreciated. Such items can be brought to the College Office on a weekday morning.

From the Archives

For this anniversary year, 150 years since the death of John Mason Neale, we include part of a letter from Neale to his second daughter, Mary, known as May. In 1859, Neale and his wife, with their eldest daughter, Agnes, and a dear friend's daughter, went for a tour of Brittany.

May 28th 1859, My dearest little May,

I wonder if I can write in this jolting carriage a letter which you may be able to read. We are going out from Brest to the Land's End of France. Agnes is further from you than she has ever been before, and we shall be so glad to get home to you all. I have a little silver cross for you, which I bought at Rennes. You and Ermy (Ermenild) and Baby, (Margaret) too, only Baby would have been rather frightened, would have liked to see the Museum yesterday. There were a great many stuffed beasts- a bear, a leopard, a great many monkeys...

You can't think how many wayside crosses there are set up on the roads- some of stone, some of wood, some with several figures of the three Marias and S. John, some with only our Lord... The driver has just stopped to show us on the top of a hill at a distance a very tall menhir...

I am so very glad Master Chapman has been able to read prayers so well. Tell him so, and that I am very much obliged to him...

All well, we shall cross from Dieppe to Newhaven and so come home straight from there by the Brighton line, and very glad we shall be to have our pets (younger children) again. Now give my love to Er., and Baby and Miss Baker (a governess or nanny?) and remember me kindly to the servants and to all the people, and especially to Master Chapman and Simonds, and Mrs Payne and Mrs Alcock, and Miss Swayland and Mary Jenks. God bless you my pet, Your very dear Papa, JM Neale.

When Mary (by then married to the Rev'd R. Lawson and the mother of seven children) edited her Father's letters, she wrote that Master Chapman was one of the pensioners at Sackville College, but that they did not share her father's gratitude, for Master Chapman read very slowly, sometimes stopping to spell out a word. Once, one of the old women pensioners prompted him, calling out loudly 'Pavilion, Master Chapman, pavilion'! During short absences, the Warden generally deputed one of the brethren to read in the Chapel. Master Everest had died by this time, but was a much better 'scholar'. Master Everest was a great friend of the Neale children. He had been a cricketer in his youth and despite being very lame, gave Cornelius Vincent Neale his first cricket lessons. 'When the old man's turn to go in came,' Mary 'used to stand beside him and make his runs for him, he being nearly eighty and I about four or five'.

This letter and the touching footnote from his daughter give us a glimpse of Neale's character and family life. He was still 'inhibited' from celebrating Holy Communion in the Chapel, but read prayers for the almspeople. He clearly thought about the College residents whilst he was away. Here is Neale travelling in France, using the Brighton railway line to come home, taking an interest in the Breton scenery, but missing his younger children and writing home affectionately.

His daughter's commentary brings in all five Neale children.
